A letter just received by friends of John A. Folcy, a lawyer of 44 Broadway, gives an ac count of his daughter's narrow escape from drowning in Britiany, France, on Aug. 28. The young lady and an acquaintance of hers were imprudent enough to forget about the dangerous tides in that vicinity, and both were hemmed in on the beach by the rising waters, when Miss Foley's companion scaled the cliffs and brought assistance. The Foleys, previous to their trip abroad, lived in Hackensack, N. J., where they have many friends. Last year Mrs. Foley, with her two daughters and son, went abroad in order to give her daughters the benefit of the French schools in completing their education. The family stayed in Paris until the early part of last summer. The schools closed at that time, and they went to spend the summer in Britany. The place at which they stopped is on the coast near Parnichet, a small town thirty miles from Nantes. This part of Brittany is very popular with the English, and the hotel at which the family stopped is generally filled in summer with English-speaking people. The coast is very rocky with high cliffs. Beneath the cliffs is a sandy beach, part of which is exposed at low tide, but at other times is

The coast is very rocky with high clims. Befach the cliffs is a sandy beach, part of which is exposed at low tide, but at other times is sovered by the water. The tide rises very fast. On the afternoon of Aug. 28 Miss Elizabett Foley, the younger of the two daughters, went foley, the younger of the two daughters, went out walking with a girl friend whose acquaintance she had made while at the hotel. Miss Foley is about 19 yea sold. Her companion was somewhat older. In the course of their walk the two wandered along the cliffs, which at that point were something over 100 feet high. At some distance from the hotel a path descends to the beach, and the young ladies followed it. Few of the guests at the hotel were out that day, and ho one observed the direction which the young ladies took.

They walked along the beach for some distance, forgetting all about the tide in the earn-ostness of their conversation antil one of them observed that her feet were getting wet. This fact led them to note the progress the tide had been making, and they were greatly alarmed to discover that they were then confided to a stri) of sand scarcely five feet in width. A glance showed them that all chance of escaning by the path by which they had descended to the beach was cut off. The tide had already covered that part of the beach, and the long combers coming in were tossing their spray about the bottom of the path. Ahead the beach again grew narrower and they soon saw that it was best to siny where they were.

Abo. sthem towered a hundred feet of precipitous rocks. Before them stretched the broad expanse of the ocean, which was threatening to overwheim them. Miss Foley was momentary danger of collabsing altogether, but her companion bravely looked about her for means of escape. She perceived that the cliff was broken at frequent intervals by ledges of rock, and she determined to attemnt to make the perflous ascent. To call for help was useless, as their volces were drowned by the breakers. Both girls began to scale the rocke, but it w companion resident to go did, nower, for it also reached the top of the cliff, she knew she could call assistance.

How she got there she does not remember, but she at length found herself at the summit. She called frantically for assistance, and hurried toward the station of the coast guard, a short distance sway. The guardsmen ran to the dogs of the cliff with a safety line and lowered it to Miss Foley. She caught hold of it with one hand, but clung to the cliff with the other. The Customs officer passed by the spot at this moment, and he saw that it would be impossible to raise the girl in that way. A rope was hastily tied to the base of the signal staff, and one of the guardsmen was lowered to the girl beneath. Another rope was thrown to him, and this he made fast about her waist. Both were then frawn up by the men on the cliff. Miss Foley fainted as soon as the rescue was accomplished, and it was a long time before she fully recovered from her experience. fore the fully recovered from her experience.

GAS EXPLOSION IN A SUBWAY. Manhole Covers Blown Off at Second Aveane and 28d Street-Nobody Hurt.

There was an explosion of gas in an electrical subway at Twenty-third street and Second avenue at noon resterday, and tons of iron and paving stones were shot into the air, but nobody was hurt. The explosion was in a sub-way on the south side of Twenty-thrid street. which carries dezens of electric light and power wires. Just clear of each curb at both the southeast and southwest corners of Second avenue are manholes. Each of these a about eight feet deep and five feet square. They are covered with cast-iron caps, which reigh, with their inner and outer covers and the row of paving stones around their edges. The subways themselves are both one and water proof, but the gas and water through the brick work of the manholes. and it was a combination of the two that caused yesterday's explosion. That there are not as many of these explosions as formerly is due to the fact that there are twelve blower stations in the town, each of which forces 1,500 cubic feet of fresh air through the subways

Water accumulated in the manhele at the southwest corner yesterday until it covered a number of the lead-covered cables running through the manhole. One of these cables had a defective joint in it, where the cable had been spliced, and when the water touched this it formed an electric conductor, and the electric current passing tarough the wires of the cable flashed from wire to wire and burned a great hole in the cable, and at the same time sent out a great spark. This fired the gas in the manhole.

The explosion which followed made but little noise, but it sent the cover of the manhole over the spark flying into the air, and ripped up a square of paving stones afteen feet across. At the same time the fire ran through the subway to the southeast corner, and there the Water accumulated in the manhole at the

At the same time the fire ran through the sub-way to the southeast corner, and there the manhole cover was sent into the air until it was even with the top of a lamp post that stands near by. A shower of paving stones went up with it.

There were four persons at that corner at the time. One was a woman who was bount, up town: two were little scho lights going east on Twenty-third street, and one was a man going down town. The great from cover turned in the sir and fell almost at the feet of the wo-man, and the paving stones scattered about among all four persons, but all escaped with no worse harm than a liberal coating of dust.

DEATH OF ABRAHAM S. MANNE. It Occurred While He Was Attending an

Engagement Celebration. Abraham S. Manne, the well-known retired dry goods merchant of Brooklyn, died suddenly of heart disease on Sunday night while attending the celebration of the engagement of his nephew, Berthold Schnurer, to Miss Louisa Teller at the latter's home in Eighty-seventh street, near Third avenue, in this city. He was prostrated while mingling with the guests in the parlor, and died a few minutes after being carried to a room up stairs.

His wife, sons, and several other relatives were present at the time. The remains were were present at the time. The remains were removed yesterday to his late home at 343 Union street, Brooklyn. BUSINESS TROUBLES.

Complicated Affairs of Charles E. Runk of the Harlem Casino Company.

Arthur M. King has been appointed receiver in supplementary proceedings for Charles E. Runk, real estate operator of 47 Broad street, and Treasurer of the Harlem Casino Company, who was supposed, a year ago, to be a millionaire. The application is made by Anna C. Runk, Runk is a large stockholder in the National Wall Paper Company, holding $87,000 of de-benture stock and $500,000 to $700,000 common stock. The latter has never paid a dividend, but the former receives 8 per cent, annual dividends. The debenture stock has been pledged as security for money loaned, $50,000 to the Chemical National Bank, $5,000 to the West Side Bank, $25,000 to W. C. C. Lartz and L. C. Kuhner, and the rest to the Yorkville Bank, The common stock is all pledged to Frederick Beck, his father-in-law, as security for money due him. Mr. Runk has assigned to Mr. Beck equities in life insurance policies of $90,000 on which other parties have leaned $11,500, and has conveyed real estate in New York and Brooklyn to Mr. Beck. He has not had an accounting with Mr. Beck. He has not had an accounting with Mr. Beck. They have been in real estate transactions together. Runk gave Jacob Rupperts amortgage on property at Mount Hope, Westchester County, to secure a note for $15,000 which Ruppert had endorsed, and he also assigned a claim of $16,000 against the Harlem Casino Company to Mr. Ruppert. Mr. Runk also gave a mortgage of $8,000 to Emil Unger on 288 Fifth avenue, after a mortgage of $120,000. as security for money loaned. Mr. Runk also mortgaged some property to his wife, and made a mortgage on real estate to secure her for $25,000 debenture stock of the National Wail Paper Company, which she let him have to pledge with the Yorkville Bank to secure a loan of $20,000. Mr. Runk in his examination said that after satisfying the claims secured by him there may be some equity in his property. Judge MacLean also extended this receivership to include a Judgment obtained by the Chemical National Hank of $15,003 against Mr. Runk.

SNEAK THIEF AT A WAKE.

He Runs Off With Three Overcoats-The Mourners Pursue and Nab Him.

While the mourners were doing the proper thing at the wake of Mrs. Mary Morris of 160 West Twenty-first street last night a sneak thief entered the basement, gathered in a double armful of overcoats, and went out again. A fifteen-year-old nephew of the dead woman, named O'Neill, saw the thief escaping and gave the alarm, setting out in pursuit himself, several rods in advance of the rest of the mourners, erai rods in advance of the rest of the mourners, who trailed along in the rest, led by the chief mourner, Robert Morris.

Their speed was somewhat affected by their stopping to examine the garments which the fugitive dropped from time to time as he fied toward Sixth avenue. Young O'Neill, however, stopped for nothing, and was so close upon the thief when the latter turned the corner that he saw him hand two of the coats to a second man who ran away.

There two and a score of men and women from the wake escorted the prisoner to the West Thirt eth street station, where he said he was Charles Lynch, 2c years old, of Philadelphia, lie had one overceat with him, but, curiously enough, none of the mourners recognized it as belonging to any of them.

Joseph Butler and Michael Sheedy had lost their coats, and they suppose that they were the body handed over by the thief to the other man, who escaped. Lynch was locked up, and the mourners returned to continue the waking of Mrs. Morris.

MOVEMENTS OF WAR SHIPS.

The Marbichead Leaves Smyraa for Gibral-tar on Her Way Home.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10 .- Admiral Selfridge cabled the Navy Department to-day that the Marblehead left Smyrna this morning for Gibraltar on her way home, having on board all the men of his fleet whose terms of enlistment will shortly expire. The Admiral's message will shortly expire. The Admiral's message contained no reference to the other ships of his command nor to any movements he contemplated. The San Francisco and Bancroft are still with the flagship Maneapolis, and it is thought that had their mission been other than peaceful he would not have detacned the Marbielicad at this time.

WHY CARTWEIGHT RESIGNED

Charges Were Made Connecting His Name with That of a Young Woman,

When the Rev. T. C. Cartwright retires from the rectorship of St. Barnabas's Episcopal Church, in Bushwick avenue, Brooklyn, at the end of the month, he may proceed against the persons who have attacked his reputation. The vestry of the church accepted his resignation a week ago on four conditions: First, that the resignation should not take effect until Oct. 31;

a week ago on lour conditions: First, and the resignation should not take effect until Oct. 31; second, that the salary should be paid in full; third, that during the interval Dr. Cartwright should refrain from taking any part in the services of the church or interfers with the work of the parish; fourth, that he would delegate to the vestry the power to make provision for filling the paiplit in his absence.

It was learned yesterday that Mr. Cartwright's resignation was the result of a statement made by several persons to the vestry, and that a young woman who was formerly a member of the church choir had been implicated by them. Mr. Cartwright told the reporter last night that as soon as he heard of the statement he obtained from the young woman a written document to the effect that he had never acted improperly toward her. Mrs. Cartwright said that this paper was in her possession, and that she had implicit faith in her husband.

Join Morgan, a vestryman of the church, declined to discuss the case last evening, but said that it was the strangest affair that had ever come under his notice. He added that the case was in the hands of the Hishop.

MONDAY, Oct. 19. The foreign demand for the surplus products of the United States, particularly for wheat, has now assumed perpertions that must convince even the most skeptical that natural conditions have produced a situation that resembles closely that of 1879-80. The shortage of the cros in all large wheat-producing countries ex-cept the United States is now a well-estab-lished fact. At the same time an overwhelm ing popular decision in favor of the maintenance of specie payments seems to be as certain as was the resumption of those pay ments seventeen years ago. The foreign demand for food, both breadstuffs and provisions has already advanced prices with a degree of rapidity and to an extent that would ordinarily suggest the existence of a well-organized and aggressive speculative campaign. As a matter of fact, speculation has had very little to do with the advance in prices of staple products of alkinds, for the money to conduct speculative perations has not been obtainable. fact, been no easy matter for actual dealers to obtain the funds required to move the crops to market. That the demand for wheat, provisions, cotton, and other staple products is a legitimate one, and comes chiefly from abroad, is shown by the active inquiry for ocean freight room, even for remote periods, and the constant and rapid movement of those staples to the seaboard and out of the country.

Although to-day's stock market was narrow and generally described as professional in its character, it reflected the predominance of the influences just described. An advance of several cents a bushel in the price of wheat that originated in Liverpool, and which was well sustained to the close of business, although a natural reaction took place, and a weak and decidedly lower market for sterling exchange ontweighed, so far as the stock market was concerned, higher rates for money resulting from the calling and shift-ing of loans and the feeling of apprehension that still exists in certain quarters as to the outcome of the election. Materially higher prices were recorded for all of the stocks that received much attention, and also for many that were comparatively neglected. There appeared to be no special effort to advance prices; in fact, many careful observers of the market were of the opinion that the bulk of the buying was to cover shorts. The sharpness of the advance is easily explained by the paucity of offerings. If, as the bond market indicates, investors are still reluctant to increase their holdings, it is equally plain that they are determined not to part with the securities they have acquired, They have apparently convinced themselves that the one important event of the next two weeks will be a well-nigh unanimous verdict of an honest, industrious, and intelligent people in favor of the maintenance of the present monetary system and existing political institutions. The incidents of the day were the receipt of $500,000 gold from abroad and a decline in the market price of gold bullion in London of 14d, 27% This last, in connection with the decline in the price of exchange here, was generally regarded 27% as indicating a conviction abroad that a further 6846 movement of specie to this country is inevi-Sugar Refining, which also led the list in the direction of nigher prices, scoring a net advance of 314 & cent. There was absolutely no news affecting this erratic security. Some importance was attached to the manner in which 5,000 shares of the preferred stock of the company was absorbed last week, and also to the failure of reported organized opposition to the American Sugar Refining Company to materialize. St. Paul was second in point of activity, and C., B. and Quincy in the progress made toward a higher level.
